About the award

The Fiabci Prix d'Excellence is an overall development award, and not just awarded on the strength of design or marketing or project management. The judging panel will assess the merits of your project in regard to the five principal criteria (global description, architecture & design, development & construction, community benefits & environmental impact and financials & marketing), as appropriate for the category you have entered. The person entering the award must be either the developer or current owner, or alternatively someone duly authorised to act on behalf of the owner and/or developer ie architect, PR agency etc....

Recognition for the winners

After completing the full submittal form in autumn 2004, the final deliberation meeting will take place in Spring 2005 and all entrants will be notified of the results. Finalists will be honoured at an official awards ceremony at the Fiabci world congress in Athens, Greece in May 2005 where the final winners will receive their award and where an audio-visual presentation will present all finalists and winners. Winners will be entitled to use the prestigious 'Fiabci Prix d'Excellence' logo on their business materials, and will receive extensive international exposure in a number of ways including being featured in a special congratulatory advert in the global editions of The Wall Street Journal (US, Asia, Europe), in the commemorative Prix d'Excellence 2005 brochure, on fiabci.org etc... Press releases concerning the winners and finalists will be distributed to an international press list of specialised real estate and business magazines, trade journals and newspapers and winners and finalists will be invited to display press kits at the Fiabci world congress.
